

Summary of UNC Charlotte Summer Evaluation

FSP's impact is measured through an independent evaluation conducted by the University of North Carolina at Charlotte. The UNCC Center for Adolescent Literacies (CFAL) administers the Ekwall/Shanker Reading Inventory to measure if scholars gain or maintain in their reading ability. UNCC's Center for Education Measurement and Evaluation (CEME) and CFAL conduct an efficacy survey that assesses scholar attitudes.

- 87.4% of scholars gained or maintained in reading ability

- 86% of scholars believe they are a better reader
- 79% of scholars enjoy reading more
- 83% of scholars want to do Freedom School again next year
- 83% of scholars feel comfortable asking for help from a teacher when they need it
- 84% of scholars know how to better resolve conflict with other students and adults
- 83% of scholars in grades K-2 want to make a difference in their school and their community
- 91% of scholars in grades 3-8 are more proud of their race
- 88% of scholars in grades 3-8 are more proud of their community
- 87% of scholars in grades 3-8 feel better about their future
- 97% of Servant Leader Interns view themselves as a difference maker in the community and world
- 94% of Servant Leader Interns are more likely to work in their community as a result of their SLI experience
- 88% of Servant Leader Interns understanding of multiculturalism has changed or expanded as result of their SLI experience
- 97% of Servant Leader Interns are better at working with others as a result of their experience